“Fallout shelters, like The Twist, have become fashionable,” Newsweek said after President John F. Kennedy advised Americans to prepare for the threat of a nuclear attack. The prepper mentality is still flourishing today, with sales of lavish underground doomsday bunkers for use in the event of natural disasters, pandemics and civil unrest.

More Americans than ever “fear they will never live as well as their parents and worry that their children may have it even worse,” Newsweek reported as the middle class pushed for tax cuts. Today, Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez and others are advocating for tax increases on the rich to provide middle-class relief. N

Kristen Stewart

➤ PORTRAYING THE BELOVED LATE PRINCESS DIANA WOULD BE A DAUNTING task for any actor, but when director Pablo Larrain asked Kristen Stewart to take on the role in his new film Spencer (November 5th), she agreed immediately. “When I first started talking to Pablo, I didn’t even know what the project was yet. I was like, ‘I’ll do it.’” She admits, “it felt a little bit reckless,” but that spirit felt appropriate for Larrain’s Diana. “There was something about this sort of psychotic confidence that he had. Something about him feels unstoppable.” The film is a reimagining of a period of three days over Christmas shortly before Diana separates from Prince Charles. “She was fighting for her life and trying to get to the point where she could become herself and be embodied.” Of course, a film like this has Oscar written all over it, something Stewart is fine with because of how proud she is of Larrain and ultimately how much she came to admire Diana. “I had so much fun playing her, even on days that were only the dark things.”

Did you have any reservations about playing someone so iconic?

For six months, I woke up scared. It definitely scared me leading right up before we started shooting. It was absolutely a physical manifestation of deep fear.

How did you find the balance between showing Diana’s fragile mental state while not making her look unhinged?

Even when she was being disarmingly casual and beautiful and empathetic, you just want to be near somebody like that. There’s also something right beneath the first layer of her skin that feels like she’s going to explode or is delicate. She felt unpredictable in a way that felt dangerous. There was something about her that made me feel so strong. I felt protective of her.

What was the hardest part of your performance?

I had to really push the idea of her passing out of my mind because she was so alive to me. Three or four times a week I would feel this grief because I couldn’t f*cking believe she died in that car.

Does all the Oscar buzz make you uncomfortable?

No. I feel so grateful for how big this conversation has become. It’s awesome. I love [Diana]. And I love Pablo and I definitely feel like championing them. We’ve just had the best time with it.—H. Alan Scott
